

Psalms 92:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

A brutish man knoweth not; neither doth a fool understand this.

Analysis

---

The contrast between the senseless (ba'ar—brutish, like cattle) man and deep thoughts (makhshavot—purposes/plans) of God highlights the spiritual blindness that prevents seeing divine wisdom in creation. This is not mere intellectual limitation but willful ignorance. The 'fool' (kesil) lacks spiritual discernment, unable to perceive God's hand in the world. This aligns with Paul's teaching in Romans 1:20 about inexcusable rejection of natural revelation.

Historical Context

Ancient Israel was surrounded by nature worship that saw power in creation but missed the Creator. The psalmist confronts such shallow thinking.
