

Psalms 97:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart.

Analysis

Light being 'sown' (zara) for the righteous uses agricultural imagery suggesting both God's initiative and future harvest. Light symbolizes joy, clarity, truth, and blessing—all aspects of salvation. Gladness for the 'upright in heart' (yashar lev) emphasizes internal righteousness, not mere external conformity. The sowing metaphor indicates that blessing may not be immediate but is certain to come to fruition. This verse promises that righteousness will ultimately be rewarded, encouraging perseverance in godliness despite present hardship.

Historical Context

Agricultural societies understood sowing as requiring patience—there's delay between planting and harvest, but the harvest is certain if seed is sown.
