

Revelation 11:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the same hour was there a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city fell, and in the earthquake were slain of men seven thousand: and the remnant were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven.

Analysis

The great earthquake killing seven thousand represents partial judgment leading survivors to fear and give glory to God. Unlike previous judgments where hearts remained hardened (9:20-21), this provokes proper response. The number seven thousand may echo 1 Kings 19:18's remnant who hadn't bowed to Baal, suggesting God preserves a faithful minority. 'Gave glory to God' could indicate genuine repentance or mere fear-driven acknowledgment. Reformed theology recognizes that God's judgments sometimes break hard hearts, bringing some to salvation. The tenth part destroyed shows measured judgment, not total annihilation.

Historical Context

Jerusalem experienced earthquakes throughout history, including at Christ's crucifixion (Matthew 27:51). The imagery would resonate with residents of seismically active regions. Earthquakes in Scripture often accompany divine appearances or judgments (Exodus 19:18, Ezekiel 38:19). The specific numbers suggest symbolic completeness—seven thousand, tenth part—rather than precise mathematics.
