

Revelation 22:1

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

Analysis

A pure river of water of life, clear as crystal (ποταμὸν ὕδατος ζωῆς λαμπρὸν ὡς κρύσταλλον, potamon hydatos zōēs lampron hōs krystallon)—This climactic vision echoes Ezekiel 47:1-12 where water flows from the temple, and Zechariah 14:8 where living waters flow from Jerusalem. The Greek hydatos zōēs (water of life) recalls Jesus's promise to the Samaritan woman: "whoever drinks of the water that I will give him will never thirst" (John 4:14). The absolute purity and crystal clarity contrasts with the polluted, death-bringing waters of Babylon (Revelation 17-18).

Proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb—The singular throne (not thrones) affirms Christ's full deity, sharing God's eternal throne. This river doesn't originate from the ground but from God's very throne, signifying that eternal life flows solely from divine grace. Eden's river (Genesis 2:10) divided into four branches spreading outward; here one unified river flows from God to His redeemed humanity—Paradise not merely restored but gloriously consummated. The imagery fulfills Psalm 46:4, "There is a river whose streams make glad the city of God."

Historical Context

John wrote Revelation circa AD 95 from exile on Patmos during Domitian's persecution. His original audience—seven churches in Asia Minor—faced pressure to participate in emperor worship and pagan rituals. This vision of the New Jerusalem concludes the entire biblical narrative: from Eden's garden with its river (Genesis 2) to the consummated city-garden with its river of life. First-century believers suffering under Roman oppression would recognize the Ezekiel allusions and find hope that God's dwelling with humanity would be perfectly realized.

Study Questions

1. How does the river proceeding from God's throne challenge any notion that eternal life comes from human achievement rather than divine grace?
2. What does the crystal purity of this water reveal about the holiness and perfection of the age to come, and how should that shape your present pursuit of sanctification?
