

Revelation 22:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand.

Analysis

The command not to seal the book contrasts Daniel's instruction to seal his prophecy (Daniel 12:4). Daniel's visions awaited distant fulfillment; Revelation's are imminent ('time is at hand'). The unsealed book indicates accessibility—all believers should read, understand, and obey. Reformed theology emphasizes Scripture's perspicuity—it's clear for salvation and obedience, not hidden in esoteric meanings. The urgency ('time is at hand') calls for immediate response, not academic study divorced from application. Unsealing demands proclamation and obedience.

Historical Context

Sealed documents remained closed until appointed time or proper authority opened them. Daniel's sealed vision indicated lengthy delay before fulfillment. John's unsealed revelation indicated imminent application—churches needed immediate access to these warnings and encouragements. The approaching persecutions made the visions' guidance urgent and necessary for faithful endurance.

Study Questions

1. How does Revelation's unsealed nature challenge you to read and apply it rather than avoiding it as too difficult or mysterious?
2. What does the urgency ('time is at hand') teach about treating biblical prophecy as practically relevant rather than merely academically interesting?
