

Romans 13:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

Analysis

For for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing—Dia touto gar kai phorous teleite-leitourgoi gar theou eisin eis auto touto proskarterountes (διὰ τοῦτο γὰρ καὶ φόρους τελεῖτε· λειτουργοὶ γὰρ θεοῦ εἰσιν εἰς αὐτὸ τοῦτο προσκαρτεροῦντες). Phorous (taxes/tribute) were resented under Roman occupation; Jewish zealots refused payment as capitulation. Paul commands payment: teleite (present tense—keep paying).

The reason: government officials are leitourgoi theou (λειτουργοὶ θεοῦ, ministers/servants of God). Leitourgos is cultic language—used for priests performing sacred service (Hebrews 8:2). Tax collectors are God's liturgists! Proskarterountes (προσκαρτερέω, devoting themselves) indicates devoted service. Paying taxes funds God-ordained government, enabling justice, order, and infrastructure. Refusing taxes is refusing to support God's appointed servants.

Historical Context

Tax resistance was volatile in first-century Judea. Judas the Galilean led a revolt in AD 6 protesting Roman taxation (Acts 5:37). Jesus Himself addressed this: 'Render unto Caesar' (Matthew 22:21). Paul echoes Jesus, establishing that Christians pay taxes as religious duty, not political coercion. This teaching countered both zealot rebellion and Gentile tax evasion, calling the church to model civic responsibility.

Later Christians debated whether taxes funding pagan temples or unjust wars could be paid in good conscience.
