

Romans 15:29

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I am sure that, when I come unto you, I shall come in the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ.

Analysis

And I am sure that, when I come unto you, I shall come in the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ (οἶδα δὲ ὅτι ἐρχόμενος πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐν πληρώματι εὐλογίας Χριστοῦ ἐλεύσομαι, oida de hoti erchomenos pros hymas en plērōmati eulogias Christou eleusomai)—Oida (I know, I am sure) expresses confident assurance. Plērōmati (fullness, abundance) suggests overflowing blessing, not meager measure. Eulogias Christou (blessing of Christ) could be objective genitive (blessing from Christ) or subjective genitive (blessing that is Christ himself)—likely both. Paul expects his Roman visit will overflow with Christ's presence, power, and blessing.

This confidence isn't presumption but faith: Paul trusts that faithfully completing his mission (Jerusalem collection) positions him to experience God's abundant blessing in Rome. The 'fullness of blessing' may include mutual encouragement (1:11-12), effective ministry, gospel advancement, and preparation for Spanish mission. This models expectant faith: trusting God's blessing on faithful obedience.

Historical Context

Ironically, Paul did come to Rome 'in the fullness of blessing,' but via circumstances he didn't anticipate: arrest, shipwreck, and imprisonment (Acts 21-28). Yet even in chains, he experienced blessing—conversions in Caesar's household (Phil 4:22), writing Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Philemon, and Acts 28:30-31's report of unhindered preaching. God's 'blessing' transcended Paul's expectations.

Study Questions

1. How does Paul's confidence in coming 'in the fullness of blessing' challenge or encourage your expectations when serving God faithfully?
2. In what ways have you experienced God's blessing arriving differently than you anticipated, yet recognizably full and abundant?
3. What would 'fullness of the blessing of the gospel' look like in your current ministry or life context?
