

Romans 16:22

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I Tertius, who wrote this epistle, salute you in the Lord.

Analysis

I Tertius, who wrote this epistle, salute you in the Lord—Aspazomai hymas egō Tertios ho grapsas tēn epistolēn en kyriō (ἀσπάζομαι ὑμᾶς ἐγὼ Τέρτιος ὁ γράψας τὴν ἐπιστολὴν ἐν κυρίῳ). Ho grapsas (ὁ γράφω, the one writing) identifies Tertius as Paul's amanuensis (secretary). En kyriō (in the Lord) shows Tertius isn't mere scribe but fellow believer. Paul typically dictated letters (Romans, 1-2 Corinthians, Galatians, Colossians, 1-2 Thessalonians, Philemon mention dictation), signing them personally (Galatians 6:11, 'see what large letters'; 2 Thessalonians 3:17, 'the token in every epistle'). Tertius' greeting humanizes the text—this theological masterpiece passed through human hands, written painstakingly with stylus on papyrus.

Historical Context

Amanuenses (secretaries) were common in antiquity: educated slaves, freedmen, or hired professionals transcribed dictation. Paul likely couldn't write extensively due to poor eyesight (Galatians 4:15, 6:11) or manual labor damage to hands (tentmaking). Tertius' skill in Greek rhetoric and theology shows in Romans' literary quality—yet the content is Paul's (1:1, 'Paul...called an apostle'). This partnership between apostle and scribe mirrors the Spirit's inspiration through human authors: divine authority mediated through human personality. Tertius' brief greeting honors the 'invisible' laborers—scribes, copyists, messengers—who preserved and transmitted Scripture.
