

Romans 2:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

(For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified.

Analysis

For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified—οὐ γὰρ οἱ ἀκροαταὶ νόμου δίκαιοι παρὰ θεῷ (ou gar hoi akroatai nomou dikaioi para theō), "not the hearers of law are righteous before God." Ἀκροατής (akroatēs, "hearer") describes one who listens but doesn't obey. Δίκαιος (dikaios, "righteous/just") refers to standing before God's judgment seat. Ποιηταὶ νόμου δικαιωθήσονται (poiētai nomou dikaiōthēsontai, "doers of law will be justified").

This verse seems to contradict 3:20 ("by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified") and 3:28 ("justified by faith without the deeds of the law"). The resolution: Paul here states the standard of judgment (perfect obedience) to show no one meets it (3:10-18), driving all to justification by faith. He's not prescribing how to be justified but exposing the futility of mere Torah knowledge without transformation. James 1:22-25 makes the identical argument against self-deceiving hearers.

The future dikaiōthēsontai ("will be justified") is eschatological—at final judgment, doers are vindicated. But Paul will show this comes only through faith in Christ, who perfectly 'did' the law (Matthew 5:17), imputing His obedience to believers (Romans 5:19, 2 Corinthians 5:21). Perfect law-keeping justifies, but only Christ achieved it; believers receive it as gift.

Historical Context

First-century Judaism emphasized Torah study and synagogue attendance. Many Jews equated hearing scripture read and expounded with righteousness. Jesus condemned this in Matthew 7:21-27 (hearing versus doing) and Matthew 23 (scribes and Pharisees who say but don't do). Paul here echoes Jesus: possession and knowledge of God's word without obedience brings condemnation, not salvation. This would shock hearers who viewed Torah study as inherently meritorious.

Study Questions

1. In what areas am I a 'hearer' of God's word—familiar with biblical teaching—but not a 'doer' who obeys it?
2. How does this verse drive me to Christ, recognizing I cannot justify myself by doing the law perfectly?
3. What biblical commands do I mentally assent to without allowing them to transform my behavior?
