

Romans 6:23

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Analysis

For the wages of sin is death—ta gar opsōnia tēs hamartias thanatos (τὰ γὰρ ὄψώνια τῆς ἀμαρτίας θάνατος). Opsōnia (ὄψώνια, wages) was military pay, earned compensation. Sin pays its 'employees' exactly what they deserve: death. The genitive tēs hamartias (of sin) indicates sin as employer; death is the earned wage. This is justice: sin merits death. Thanatos (θάνατος, death) encompasses spiritual death (separation from God now), physical death (mortality), and eternal death (hell, second death). The wage is earned, deserved, and paid in full.

But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord—to de charisma tou theou zōē aiōnios en Christō Iēsou tō kyriō hēmōn (τὸ δὲ χάρισμα τοῦ θεοῦ ζωὴν αἰώνιος ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ τῷ κυρίῳ ἡμῶν). Sharp contrast: opsōnia (wages, earned) vs. charisma (χάρισμα, gift, unearned). Eternal life isn't earned but graciously given. En Christō Iēsou (ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, in Christ Jesus)—union with Christ is the sphere where this gift exists; apart from Christ, no eternal life. The full title emphasizes His mediatorial role: Jesus (Savior), Christ (Messiah), our Lord (sovereign Master). This verse summarizes Romans 6 and the gospel: sin earns death; grace gives life through Christ. The two slaveries have opposite compensations: wages (death) vs. gift (life).

Historical Context

Roman soldiers understood wages—regular pay (stipendium) and bonuses (donativum). Paul uses opsōnia (wages) to emphasize sin's 'earned' consequence.

Gift-giving in Roman culture involved patronage (benefaction expecting loyalty/gratitude), but Paul's charisma (gift of grace) is freely given without strings. Jewish theology taught that sin brings death (Genesis 2:17, Ezekiel 18:20); Paul affirms this but contrasts it with God's gift of life in Christ. The phrase 'in Christ Jesus' became central to Pauline theology—all salvation blessings exist in union with Christ, not as independent transactions.

Study Questions

1. How does understanding eternal life as 'gift' rather than 'wages' transform your approach to obedience and assurance?
2. What 'wages' of sin have you experienced that confirm sin's deadly payment system?
3. How does the full title 'Jesus Christ our Lord' shape your understanding of how eternal life is given?
