

Romans 7:14

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For we know that the law is spiritual: but I am carnal, sold under sin.

Analysis

For we know that the law is spiritual—Pneumatikos (πνευματικός, "spiritual") means proceeding from the Holy Spirit, demanding heart-level obedience beyond external compliance. Law requires love, not mere behavioral conformity (Matthew 22:37-40). But I am carnal, sold under sin—Sarkinos (σάρκινος, "fleshly/carnal") describes the believer's remaining sin nature, not total depravity. Peprāmenos hypo tēn hamartian (πεπραμένος ὑπὸ τὴν ἁμαρτίαν, "sold under sin") uses perfect tense—ongoing state from past action.

This begins the disputed section (vv. 14-25): does Paul describe pre-Christian or Christian experience? The present tense "I am," personal pronouns, present struggle, delight in God's law (v. 22), and serving God's law with the mind (v. 25) argue for regenerate experience. Paul describes the believer's ongoing war with indwelling sin—not total dominion by sin (that's the unregenerate state) but real conflict with remaining corruption.

Historical Context

Reformed interpreters (Augustine, Luther, Calvin) consistently understood vv. 14-25 as describing the regenerate believer's struggle with remaining sin. The Wesleyan/Arminian tradition often sees this as pre-Christian experience, but contextual markers (delight in law, serving God with mind, present tense) support the regenerate view. Paul depicts sanctification as warfare, not instant perfection.

Study Questions

1. How does recognizing this as the normal Christian experience (not just pre-conversion struggle) change your expectations for sanctification?
2. What comfort do you find in Paul's honest description of the conflict between law's spiritual demands and indwelling sin?
3. Where do you see evidence in your life of both 'serving the law of God with the mind' and struggling with remaining 'carnality'?
