

Romans 8:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness.

Analysis

And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin (ei de Christos en humin, to sōma nekron dia hamartian)—Paul shifts from Spirit in you (v. 9) to Christ in you, again demonstrating Trinitarian unity. "The body is dead" doesn't mean physical death but mortality—nekron indicates the body's death-bound condition. Dia hamartian ("because of sin") points to Genesis 3: Adam's sin brought death's sentence. Even redeemed believers experience physical decay; salvation has not yet reversed mortality.

But the Spirit is life because of righteousness (to pneuma zōē dia dikaiosunēn)—The contrast is striking: body death-bound, Spirit life-giving. The Spirit imparts zōē (eternal life quality) dia dikaiosunēn ("because of righteousness")—likely Christ's imputed righteousness (3:21-26) which satisfies justice and secures life. Though the body awaits resurrection (v. 11), the Spirit's presence is present-tense life, the "already" of salvation before the "not yet" of glorification (v. 23).

Historical Context

Gnostic movements in the early centuries despised the body as evil, teaching that salvation meant escape from physical existence. Paul affirms bodily resurrection (v. 11, 23), not escape from embodiment. The tension between present spiritual life and future bodily redemption shapes Christian eschatology—we live between resurrection and return.
