

Ruth 2:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And she said, I pray you, let me glean and gather after the reapers among the sheaves: so she came, and hath continued even from the morning until now, that she tarried a little in the house.

Analysis

The servant commends Ruth's diligence: she requested permission humbly, then 'came, and hath continued even from morning until now'. The Hebrew indicates she worked steadily through the hot day with minimal rest—brief shelter breaks from the sun. Ruth's industry demonstrates biblical work ethic: diligence, initiative, perseverance. Proverbs 31's excellent wife 'rises while it is yet night' and 'does not eat the bread of idleness'—Ruth embodies this ideal. Her work was grateful response to God's provision through gleaning laws, not begrudging obligation.

Historical Context

Ancient agricultural labor during harvest was physically demanding, particularly in Mediterranean heat. Barley harvest occurred in late spring with rising temperatures. Gleaning involved hours of stooping, carrying armloads, separating kernels—backbreaking work. That Ruth worked from morning until evening demonstrates remarkable stamina. The 'house' likely refers to temporary field shelter for sun protection. Ruth's diligence as newcomer was noteworthy—she could have claimed special accommodation as foreigner but worked harder than established gleaners, earning respect through observable character.

Study Questions

1. How does Ruth's work ethic challenge contemporary views of hard work as oppressive?
2. What does her humble request despite having legal rights teach about approaching opportunities with gratitude?
