

Zechariah 13:1

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness.

Analysis

In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness. Following chapter 12's prophecy of looking on the pierced one, chapter 13 describes cleansing provision. "In that day" links to Messiah's coming. "A fountain opened" (maqor niphthach) describes flowing spring—not a closed cistern but perpetually flowing source of cleansing. "For sin and for uncleanness" (le-chatat u-le-niddah) covers both moral guilt and ceremonial defilement. This fountain is Christ's blood shed at the cross, cleansing all who come (1 John 1:7; Revelation 1:5). The hymn "There Is a Fountain" draws directly from this verse.

Historical Context

Post-exilic Jews performed ritual washings and sacrifices for cleansing, but these were temporary, external, and repetitive. Zechariah prophesies a permanent, effective cleansing source. Fulfilled in Christ whose once-for-all sacrifice cleanses definitively (Hebrews 9:11-14, 10:1-18). The fountain opened at the cross when Christ's side was pierced and blood and water flowed (John 19:34)—the very connection Zechariah makes between being pierced (12:10) and the fountain opening (13:1). This cleansing becomes available to all who believe.

Study Questions

1. How does Christ's blood as a fountain differ from Old Testament ceremonial washings?
2. What does it mean that the fountain is "opened"—accessible to all who come?
3. How should assurance of complete cleansing affect our approach to sin and confession?
