

Zechariah 14:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And it shall be, that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, even upon them shall be no rain.

Analysis

And it shall be, that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of hosts—universal requirement: all nations must send representatives annually. Even upon them shall be no rain (וְלֹא עָלֵיהֶם יִהְיֶה הַגֶּשֶׁם)—geshem (rain) withheld as covenant curse for disobedience (Deuteronomy 28:23-24). This demonstrates that millennial kingdom, though characterized by peace and righteousness under Messiah's rule, still involves human responsibility and consequences for disobedience.

Rain represents God's blessing and agricultural prosperity. Withholding rain causes famine, economic collapse, suffering—motivating compliance. This isn't arbitrary tyranny but covenantal: obedience brings blessing, disobedience brings curse (Deuteronomy 11:13-17). The principle that governed Israel's land promises now extends globally under Messiah's reign. This challenges overly romanticized views of millennium as automatic utopia; it involves Christ's 'iron rod' rule (Revelation 19:15) enforcing righteousness.

Historical Context

During Christ's millennial reign from Jerusalem, international worship at Feast of Tabernacles isn't optional—it's mandatory with enforced penalties. This demonstrates Christ's kingly authority over all nations and validates the gospel's call to submission. Even in glorified conditions, human will requires divine governance to maintain righteousness.

Study Questions

1. What does mandatory worship with consequences teach about God's rightful authority over all humanity?
2. How does millennial kingdom involving 'stick' (withheld rain) and 'carrot' (blessing) parallel gospel invitation?
3. Why is enforced righteousness necessary even in millennial kingdom before final rebellion (Revelation 20:7-9)?
