

Zechariah 14:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And it shall come to pass in that day, that the light shall not be clear, nor dark:

Analysis

This cryptic apocalyptic prophecy declares 'it shall come to pass in that day, that the light shall not be clear, nor dark' (the Hebrew text is difficult, with variant readings: 'precious lights will congeal' or 'lights will withdraw'). The vision depicts cosmic disruption accompanying the Day of the LORD. Verses 6-7 describe abnormal celestial phenomena: neither full light nor complete darkness, but twilight that persists. Verse 7 calls it 'one day... not day, nor night: but... at evening time it shall be light.' This supernatural light source recalls creation when God said 'Let there be light' before creating sun, moon, and stars (Genesis 1:3-5, 14-19). Eschatologically, it points to Revelation 21:23—the New Jerusalem needs no sun because 'the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.'

Historical Context

Zechariah 14 describes the eschatological Day of the LORD: nations gathering against Jerusalem (vv. 1-2), Messiah's appearing and fighting for Israel (vv. 3-5), cosmic upheaval (vv. 6-7), living waters flowing from Jerusalem (v. 8), and YHWH becoming king over all the earth (v. 9). This prophecy transcends immediate post-exilic context, pointing to end-times events. Partial historical fulfillments (Maccabean victories, Roman destruction, etc.) typify the ultimate fulfillment at Christ's return. Jesus referenced similar cosmic signs (Matthew 24:29, Mark 13:24-25), as does Revelation (6:12-14, 8:12). The 'one day known to the LORD' (v. 7) emphasizes its uniqueness and divine sovereignty over timing.
