

Zechariah 6:9

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

Analysis

And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying—Transition from visions (chapters 1-6:8) to symbolic action and prophecy (6:9-15). The formula vayəhī dəḇar-Yahweh 'ēlay lē'mōr (וַיְהִי דְבַר־יְהוָה אֵלַי לֵאמֹר, 'and the word of the LORD came to me saying') marks authoritative revelation, used over 100 times in the prophets. This introduces one of Zechariah's most important messianic prophecies—the crowning of Joshua the high priest as a prophetic sign pointing to the Branch, the coming Priest-King.

The shift from vision to action-prophecy is significant. Visions revealed spiritual realities invisible to human eyes; now Zechariah must perform a visible, public symbolic act—making crowns and enacting a coronation ceremony (vv. 10-15). The combination of word, vision, and enacted sign reinforces the message through multiple modes. God doesn't merely speak but demonstrates, dramatizes, and visualizes His promises. This pedagogical diversity ensures the message penetrates: some learn by hearing, some by seeing, some by participating. The coming prophecy will unveil the Branch's identity and dual office as both priest and king, uniquely fulfilled in Jesus Christ.

Historical Context

The transition occurs after the eight night visions (chapters 1-6) which occurred February 15, 519 BC. This symbolic action likely occurred soon after, still during Darius I's reign and the temple rebuilding. The action-prophecy would have been witnessed by the returned exiles, providing tangible hope that God's promises would materialize. Prophets frequently performed symbolic acts (Isaiah walked naked, Jeremiah wore a yoke, Ezekiel enacted the siege of Jerusalem) to dramatize God's word.

Study Questions

1. Why does God use multiple communication modes—words, visions, and symbolic actions—to reveal truth?
2. How does the transition from private vision to public action move prophecy from revelation to proclamation?
3. What 'symbolic actions' might God call you to perform that visibly demonstrate His word?
