

The First Commandment

Duties Toward God · The Ten Commandments

The first commandment establishes monotheism as the foundation of true religion—there is one God, and He alone deserves worship. This prohibits not only the worship of false deities but also any rival that occupies the place belonging to God alone: money, pleasure, self, career, or any created thing. The commandment flows from God's self-revelation: 'I am the LORD thy God'—the covenant name declaring His eternal, self-existent nature. Israel's God had demonstrated His supremacy by delivering them from Egypt; all other gods are nothing.
